

IG REELS SCRIPT v2: A Parachute, Not a Painting

Runtime: ~60 seconds | Tone: serious, analytical, viral | Structure: MrBeast retention — hook, escalate, reframe, thesis, loop

[0:00 – 0:03] HOOK

Reframe the headline. Subvert the obvious read.

VOICEOVER (low, deliberate): “Five billionaires just fought for ten minutes over a Pollock. They didn't buy a painting. They bought a parachute.”

ON SCREEN: “$181 MILLION” over Pollock canvas.

VISUAL: Slow zoom on the Pollock. Gavel slam. Title card hits hard.

[0:03 – 0:14] THE EVENT

Anchor the viewer in the receipts.

VOICEOVER: “Last week at Christie's — one night, sixteen lots from the Newhouse estate, $630 million sold. A Pollock at $181M. A Brancusi at $107M. Both records.”

VOICEOVER: “The Brancusi broke its old record in the first few bids.”

ON SCREEN: Headline cards stack up. “RECORD.” “RECORD.”

VISUAL: Cut between paddle raises, the Brancusi rotating, price ticker.

[0:14 – 0:25] THE REFRAME

Drop the analytical bomb. This is where the video earns the share.

VOICEOVER: “Here's what the headlines miss. There are only about thirty whales in the entire global art market. Five of them were in that room.”

VOICEOVER: “This isn't a market. It's an oligopoly flexing.”

ON SCREEN: “30 WHALES = 1 MARKET.”

VISUAL: Graphic: 30 dots on a global map. Five glow red.

[0:25 – 0:40] THE WHY

Explain the macro pressure cooker driving the move.

VOICEOVER: “Inflation won’t die. Rates stay higher for longer. Cash is losing value every quarter.”

VOICEOVER: “So the richest 0.001 percent are doing what they’ve done in every crisis for 500 years. They’re buying things you can’t print, can’t hack, can’t sanction, and can’t devalue.”

ON SCREEN: Checklist crosses off: “CASH. BONDS. REAL ESTATE.” Then: “ART.” circled.

VISUAL: News chyrons of inflation / war / banking stress flash by.

[0:40 – 0:50] THE THESIS

Make the abstract concrete. Land the metaphor.

VOICEOVER: “A $100 million painting fits in a crate. It crosses any border. It survives regime changes, currency collapses, and wars.”

VOICEOVER: “Gold does that. Diamonds do that. Art does it and appreciates 11 percent a year.”

ON SCREEN: “ART = NEW GOLD”

VISUAL: Painting in a crate being loaded into a private jet.

[0:50 – 0:57] THE PROOF

Hit them with stats while the thesis is hot.

VOICEOVER: “Twenty-seven percent of billionaires plan to increase their art exposure this year. Only eight percent are pulling back.”

VOICEOVER: “The smart money already moved. The auction is just where we get to watch.”

ON SCREEN: “27% IN. 8% OUT.”

VISUAL: Two-bar chart slams in. Red dwarfed by green.

[0:57 – 1:00] CLOSE

Land the loop. Quote-bait the caption.

VOICEOVER (slow): “They’re not buying paintings. They’re buying parachutes. Follow if you want to know what they’re buying next.”

ON SCREEN: “FOLLOW →”

VISUAL: Cut to the opening gavel slam. Loop-ready.

Production Notes

Hook variants to A/B test:

- “Five billionaires just fought over a painting. They weren’t buying art — they were buying insurance.”
- “The richest people on earth just spent $630 million in one night. Here’s what they actually bought.”
- “A painting sold for $181 million this week. The real story isn’t the price.”

Caption: “30 whales. 1 market. $630M in one night. They’re not buying paintings — they’re buying parachutes. Here’s where the smart money is going.”

Pace: No shot longer than 1.5 seconds before the reframe at 0:14. Slow down deliberately at 0:50–1:00 to let the thesis land.

Audio: Tense cinematic build. Cut the music dead at the “oligopoly flexing” line. Drop bass back in on “art = new gold.”

Aspect: 9:16, 1080×1920. Burn captions for sound-off retention.

Posting: Lead carousel slide should be the “parachute” line. Cross-post to TikTok and YouTube Shorts unchanged.
