Median views by content format

The winner isn't the product — it's short relatable meme content that builds brand affinity.

The #1 insight: Gaming/Meme "relatable" clips (11s, not even showing a pull) do ~391K median views at ~9% engagement — roughly 10× the reach of 39s luxury-reveal content. Short + native + relatable >> long product showcase. Only 1 of 50 top videos was flagged sponsored — organic-native framing wins.

Engagement rate by format

Relatable content isn't just seen — it's interacted with far more.

Video length distribution (top 50)

50% of top videos are ≤20s. The long tail (60s+) is rare and underperforms on engagement.

What this means for GemBreak scripts

- Lead with brainrot/relatable, not product. The biggest reach comes from 7–15s meme-native clips that build affinity — the pull is the payoff, not the whole video.
- Keep it ≤20s. Half of all viral videos are under 20 seconds; engagement drops as length grows.
- Never look like an ad. 49/50 top videos read as organic — the "ad" is baked into native content, not a labeled promo.
- Suspense-pull reaction is the reliable mid-tier format (live-break "is that a gold?!" moments) — great for volume + clips.
- Luxury reveals (watches/chains/Jordans) work for the niche-category track but need a hook in the first 2s or they underperform.
